“Best Practices & Continuing Challenges in Federal Indian Law”

Conference Overview

Native peoples have long been innovators in tribal governance, economic development, and cultural revitalization. Accordingly, the Conference takes a deliberate look at some of the “best practices” in federal Indian law as a means of approaching challenges faced by American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian peoples.

Panel discussions will cover Indian land & trust law, finance, criminal justice, gaming, and taxation—looking, in each instance, at a continuing legal challenge and the ways that tribes, agencies, legislators, courts, and others are responding to it. Other sessions will address domestic and international advocacy, along with ethical considerations of in-house tribal legal counsel. Focus-group panels will provide “nuts and bolts” information and strategies on water law; tribal family, women, and children’s programs; religious freedoms; civil jurisdiction; and environmental justice. An exciting line-up of speakers from private practice, education, government, and tribal leadership will provide the latest updates on these topics.

This year’s Conference also features plenary addresses by Colorado Law Dean David Getches, Seneca Nation President Robert Odawi Porter, Vice-Chair of the National Indian Gaming Commission Steffani Cochran, and Acting Solicitor of the United States Neal Katyal. A special program will honor the Native American Rights Fund’s 40th Anniversary and its leadership role in best Indian law practices. Finally, back by popular demand is the Thursday Night Barbeque, held this year at the Poeh Museum on the Pueblo of Pojoaque. We hope you will join us for a forward-thinking, practically-oriented, and inspiring conference!
