UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF FLORIDA

CASE NO. 10-CV-23507-GOLD

MICCOSUKEE TRIBE OF INDIANS,

Petitioner,

v.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Respondent.

UNITED STATES' REPLY TO THE MICCOSUKEE TRIBE OF INDIANS OF FLORIDA'S RESPONSE TO THE MOTION TO DENY PETITIONS TO QUASH

The United States hereby replies to the Tribe's response to the United States' motion to deny its petitions to quash the IRS summonses to the Tribe's third party recordkeepers in furtherance of the IRS's examination into whether the Tribe met its reporting and withholding requirements for the 2006 through 2009 tax years.

The Tribe's response betrays a wishful, willful misunderstanding of the law applicable to IRS summonses. The Tribe's response primarily rehashes its sovereign immunity arguments from its petitions to quash. (Doc. 33.) Additionally, the Tribe argues that the summonses were issued for an improper purpose—to malign the Tribe and coerce it to settle a collateral dispute—and that the summonses are overbroad. Repeatedly, the Tribe suggests that the summonses are improper because the Tribe will not ultimately be subject to reporting and withholding requirements. This proceeding is not an appropriate forum for the Tribe to argue about its ultimate tax liabilities, nor does this forum provide an opportunity for the Tribe to instruct the IRS how to conduct its investigation. Contrary to the Tribe's allegations, there is no evidence that the summonses seek anything other than documents necessary for the IRS to investigate the Tribe's possible withholding and reporting requirements.

The Tribe does not dispute that it made unreported distributions of funds to tribal members. The IRS does not know the nature of these distributions or whether the Tribe made unreported distributions to non-tribal members. The IRS has a responsibility to investigate tribal payments to determine the applicability of the internal revenue laws through the third party summonses at issue in this case. The Tribe has failed to articulate a comprehensible, much less plausible, explanation of its allegations of improper purpose, even after the Tribe was granted discovery in this case. The summonses in this case must be upheld to ensure the Tribe complied with the Internal Revenue laws of the United States.

A. Tribal sovereign immunity does not apply.

The Eleventh Circuit has held, unequivocally, that "[t]ribal sovereign immunity does not bar suits by the United States." Florida Paraplegic Ass'n v. Miccosukee Tribe of Indians of Fla., 166 F.3d 1126, 1135 (11th Cir. 1999) (citing Reich v. Mashantucket Sand & Gravel, 95 F.3d 174, 182 (2d Cir. 1996); Quileute Indian Tribe v. Babbitt, 18 F.3d 1456, 1459-60 (9th Cir. 1994)); United States v. Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians, 827 F.2d 380, 382 (8th Cir. 1987) ("[I]t is an inherent implication of the superior power exercised by the United States over the Indian tribes that a tribe may not interpose its sovereign immunity against the United States."). The Tribe persists in talking past this basic point, arguing that tribal sovereign immunity has not been waived or abrogated in this case. (Doc. 33, pp. 2-4.) However, where no sovereign immunity exists, no waiver or abrogation is required. (Doc. 16, p. 14.) The Tribe cannot quash the summonses to its third party recordkeepers by asserting sovereign immunity, even if these summonses could be considered a suit against the Tribe.

The cases that the Tribe cites do not suggest that sovereign immunity applies to summonses by the IRS and do not overcome the binding Eleventh Circuit precedent. The Tribe cites Bishop Paiute Tribe v. County of Inyo, 291 F.3d 549, 554 (9th Cir. 2002), vacated and remanded on other grounds sub nom. Invo Cnty. v. Paiute-Shoshone Indians of the Bishop County, 538 U.S. 701 (2003), United States v. James, 980 F.2d 1314 (9th Cir. 1992), and Catskill Development, LLC v. Park Place Entertainment Corp., 206 F.R.D. 78 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) for the proposition that sovereign immunity can be used to quash a subpoena by a federal court, including subpoenas to tribal third party recordkeepers. (Doc. 33, p. 6-7.) The court in Catskill addressed the Ninth Circuit's decisions in James and Bishop Paiute Tribe. 206 F.R.D. at 86-87. The Catskill court explained that there is a distinction between the James line of cases, where a tribe seeks to quash a subpoena by a private litigant (or a state), and cases where "the federal government itself subpoenaed the tribe." Id. at 88. The Catskill court concluded that "[a] tribe cannot assert sovereign immunity against the United States." Id. The Catskill court cited the Ninth Circuit's decision, two years after James and Bishop Paiute Tribe, in Quileute, which arrived at the same conclusion. 18 F.3d at 1459. Regardless whether a tribe may assert sovereign immunity to quash a subpoena by a private litigant or a warrant by a state, the Tribe may not assert sovereign immunity to quash the IRS summonses at issue here.¹

¹The United States argues, alternatively, that sovereign immunity does not apply because the summonses are issued to third party banks, are not a suit against the Tribe, and do not compel the Tribe or restrain it from doing anything. (Doc. 16, p. 15.) The Tribe responds by arguing that the IRS investigation "would expend itself on the public treasury" and restrain the Tribe from making financial decisions. (Doc. 33, p. 5 n.3.) The summonses, however, do neither of

B. The summonses were issued for a proper purpose.

To comply with the requirements of United States v. Powell, the United States need only establish a proper purpose for the summonses. 379 U.S. 48 (1964). Here, the IRS issued the summonses to investigate the Tribe's compliance with its withholding and reporting requirements as detailed in our motion to deny the petitions to quash.

The Tribe's primary argument that the summonses were issued for an improper purpose appears to be that the Tribe may ultimately not be liable for failure to properly withhold from and report its distributions because of its status as an Indian tribe. (Doc. 33, p. 8-11.) The ultimate applicability of the Internal Revenue Code is not at issue in this proceeding. Powell, 379 U.S. at 57; see also United States v. White, 853 F.2d 107, 116 (2d Cir. 1988). And in any case, the IRS has the authority to issue a summons to investigate "merely on suspicion that the law is being violated, or even just because it wants assurance that it is not." Powell, 379 U.S. at 57 (quoting United States v. Morton Salt Co., 338 U.S. 632, 642-43 (1950)). As detailed in our motion to deny the petitions to quash, the law is clear that the withholding and reporting requirements not only may but in fact do apply to the Tribe. (Doc. 16, pp. 8-11.) Indeed, 26 U.S.C. § 3402(r) explicitly applies to Indian tribes. The Tribe may not quash the summonses by arguing it will ultimately not be liable for failure to report or withhold from its distributions.

Although the Tribe accuses the United States of improperly conducting an investigation where it allegedly knows the Tribe cannot be taxed, it is the Tribe that has improperly misled this Court to believe that the Tribe is not a taxable entity, subject to withholding and reporting these things. The IRS is simply seeking to examine records in the possession of third parties, not tax the Tribe or restrain its financial decisions. The Tribe's ultimate liabilities and the effects thereof are not at issue in this case.

requirements, where it know it is. The Tribe suggests that IRS case law is limited to taxation of the Indian tribes as employers and further mocks one of the IRS's stated purposes—i.e., ascertaining whether the Tribe failed to issue Form 1099-MISC's. (Doc. 33, pp. 10-11.) First, the Tribe fails to explain how the areas of taxation investigated by the United States are any different than taxing the Tribe as an employer: in neither case is there an express mention of Indian taxation in the Code, which the Tribe insists is necessary for taxation of an Indian tribe. Thus, to the extent the Tribe acknowledges that employment taxation is proper, so are the other focuses of the IRS investigation. Moreover, the Tribe knows this to be so. The Tribe admits that it files Form 1099's with vendors. (Doc. 33, p. 14.) Thus, it well knows that it is legally required to file such 1099's and that there are relevant instances where it must do so.

The Tribe also relies on a series of non sequiturs to support its argument that the information sought is not relevant to a legitimate purpose. For example, the Tribe argues that because the summonses do not request bank records of the Tribe's casino enterprises, the IRS cannot be investigating disbursements of casino profits. (Doc. 33, p. 13.) The IRS is investigating, among other things, distributions of funds that the Tribe obtained from its casino enterprises and later transferred to its members. Naturally, this investigation involves the bank records of the Tribe, not just its casino enterprises. Also, the Tribe argues that the information sought is not relevant because it may not show whether the Tribe did, in fact, obtain taxpayer identification numbers from payment recipients and may not show for which payments the Tribe did, in fact, issue potentially required Form 1099's. (Doc. 13, pp. 13-14.)² But the summonses should not be quashed because they may not shed light on all relevant issues.

Finally, notwithstanding the Tribe having received permission to conduct discovery—highly unusual in a summons proceeding—the Tribe's allegations of improper purpose continue to more closely resemble wild conspiracy theories than substantiated fact. The Tribe suggests, for example, that the IRS issued the summonses to coerce it to settle a dispute regarding the 2000 through 2005 tax years. As Agent Furnas explained, however, his current investigation is not dependent on the outcome of the 2000 through 2005 investigation. (Ex. 1, p. 95 ln. 15 - p. 97 ln. 3.) Even if the Tribe prevailed in the collateral dispute regarding the 2000 through 2005 years, the IRS would still need to investigate the 2006 through 2009 tax years and would still need the summonsed information. Id.

The Tribe's insinuation that the summonses are part of an attempt to try the Tribe in "the court of public opinion" is equally baseless. (Doc. 33, p. 12; Ex. 1, p. 39 ln. 21 - p. 41 ln. 19.)

The summonses themselves were private, not public. Any publicizing of the information is a direct result of the Tribe's voluntary decision to petition to quash these summonses as well as the

-6- 6469930.1

The Tribe overstates the significance of the taxpayer identification numbers and misstates the United States' position. (Doc. 33, p. 13 ("This goes directly to the Government's allegations on the issue of withholding, which they admit would not apply as long as the Tribe has obtained taxpayer identification numbers from the payees prior to payment.").) Taxpayer identification numbers are only relevant to one of the potentially applicable withholding statutes: 26 U.S.C. § 3406. Furthermore, without knowing what distributions were made and at what times, it is impossible to know whether these withholding requirements apply. The first step in the examination is to see what payments the Tribe made. The second step is to determine whether the Tribe properly obtained taxpayer identification numbers. Thus, even if the Tribe were forthcoming with information regarding its collection of taxpayer identification numbers, which it has not been, the IRS would still require the summonsed information. (Ex. 1, p. 30 ln. 1 - p. 31 ln. 20 (detailing Agent Furnas's efforts to obtain information regarding the Tribe's collection of taxpayer identification numbers).)

earlier summons involving Billy Cypress. The United States has merely defended itself and, in doing so, under Powell has had to specify its proper purpose in issuing the summonses.

In support of this reply, we have attached a true and correct copy of the transcript for the deposition of Revenue Agent James Furnas to provide the proper context for the Tribe's arguments. For example, the Tribe suggests that Agent Furnas testified falsely regarding allegations of Tribal payments from armored cars in his declaration in the Billy Cypress case. (Doc. 33, p. 11.) The Tribe hypothesizes that Agent Furnas did so to mislead the press and malign the Tribe. (Doc. 33, p. 12.) First, Agent Furnas's testimony was not false; he described allegations that led to the summons at issue in the Billy Cypress matter without stating whether he ultimately could confirm all the details of the allegations. (See Doc. 33, p. 11 (quoting Doc. 15-5, Miccosukee Tribe of Indians v. United States, No. 10-21332-cv-Gold (S.D. Fla.); Ex. 1, p. 50 ln. 12 - p. 51 ln. 5.) Second, as Agent Furnas testified, he ultimately confirmed that the Tribe transferred large amounts of cash in highly secured vehicles, albeit SUV's with police escorts instead of armored cars:

So did the armored car actually go out to the reservation as alleged? From what I subsequently learned, I don't think so. Although I don't know how that's material. They brought it out there in SUVs with the police. Whether they did that or brought it out there in an armored car does not seem material to me.

(Ex. 1, p. 101 ln. 9 - 15.) When read as a whole, the deposition transcript reveals the baselessness of the Tribe's improper purpose arguments. Even after extensive discovery, the Tribe can make no case of an improper purpose. The summonses are relevant to the IRS's legitimate investigation into the Tribe's withholding and reporting requirements.

C. The summonses are not overly broad, and the information sought may lead to relevant evidence to determine the Tribe's liability.

The Tribe asserts that the summonses are overly broad because the IRS has not explained the relevance of particular items. (Doc. 13, pp. 15-16.) The Tribe appears to confuse the relevance of individual items with the breadth of the summonses. Cf. Barquero v. United States, 18 F.3d 1311, 1318 (5th Cir. 1994.) Relevance and overbreadth are separate inquiries. Id. The latter refers to the specificity of a summons and the ability of the recipient to identify responsive documents. United States v. Medlin, 986 F.2d 463, 467 (11th Cir. 1993) ("An IRS summons is overbroad if it 'does not advise the summoned party what is required of him with sufficient specificity to permit him to respond adequately to the summons."") The Tribe does not appear to dispute that the summonses are sufficiently specific.

If correctly identified as a potential relevance objections, the Tribe's arguments nonetheless fail. As stated in our motion to deny the petitions to quash, the IRS does not need to prove the relevance of the items sought. Instead, the IRS is entitled "to obtain items of even potential relevance" to its investigation. United States v. Arthur Young & Co., 465 U.S. 805, 814 (1984). Regarding the Tribe's objections to records of "credit and/or background investigations," (Doc. 13, p. 17) taxpayers are often more candid with the information they provided for credit or background investigations than they are with the IRS. E.g., United States v. Clarke, 562 F.3d 1158, 1162-64 (11th Cir. 2009) (taxpayer disclosed unreported income on credit application). In this case, credit or background investigation records may reveal whether the Tribe used financial institutions other than those summonsed. It may also reveal other sources of funds and distributions. Communications between the Tribe and its banks obviously may demonstrate the nature of payments and source of funds. Similarly, safe deposit boxes may have been involved in Tribal distributions, which the IRS suspects involved significant amounts of cash. Cf. United States v. Friedman, 532 F.2d 928, 934 (3d Cir. 1976) (overruling district court's denial of summons with regard to safe deposit box records) ("[T]he entry records would be highly significant in determining whether withdrawals from a bank account had been placed in a safe deposit box or whether expenditures or bank deposits were being made from a cash source accumulated in a safe deposit box."). Without seeing the summonsed documents it is impossible to say that they are "in no way relevant" to the IRS's examination as the Tribe alleges. (Doc. 33, p. 17.)

CONCLUSION

For the reasons identified in the United States motion to deny the Tribe's petitions to quash, the Court should deny the petitions to quash and allow the IRS to continue its investigation.

the Tribe is subject to information reporting

2 requirements under Internal Revenue Code 6041,

3 which is information return reporting. It's

4 potentially subject to backup withholding under

5 Internal Revenue Code 3406. And it is also potentially subject to withholding on certain payments of net gaming revenues to Tribal members under Code Section 3402(r).

You know, my understanding of those code sections and the Tribe's requirements comes from dealing with Tribes for many years who are meeting those reporting and withholding requirements, and various previous audits I've conducted that dealt with those issues.

So I am not sure -- I mean are you asking me in general -- I also want to say I have 17 not concluded for the years in question that --

18 that they did not meet their 1099 requirements or that they are required to file 945, because I have $20\,$ $\,$ not seen any of the information necessary to make

21 those conclusions. Okay.

22 I believe in starting the investigation about such a subject is irrelevant. So for purposes of this record I would like a standing the agent's understanding of the law is, insofar as it would bear on the legitimacy of the issuance of the summons.

MR. JORDEN: I have no problem with the standing objection. I would note for the record that I think we would all agree that if the agent had little or no basis for concluding that there was a requirement, that that would certainly weigh into the question of whether he is exercising the subpoena power with good faith.

MR. WELSH: Well, to the extent that that is certainly a debatable proposition, I certainly wouldn't agree with that as a blanket assertion.

18 MR. JORDEN: So we have had our

Mr. Furnas, you may answer the question.
THE WITNESS: You know, as we've discussed many times between me and you previously,

1 that the Tribe may have reporting and withholding requirements that haven't been met. But of course

3 before I conclude that, I have to review, you know,

4 evidence and documents before I can conclude that

5 they are required.

6 BY MR. JORDEN:

Q What I really am interested in is what steps you took with respect to the operation of this particular Tribe in the manner in which they made distributions to their members, as to the application of the 945 and the 1099 requirements to this particular Tribe? What steps did you take prior to initiating your investigation and your issuing of the subpoena?

A Well, as you know, this was the expansion to these years of the examination. There were -- examination was conducted for the years 2000 through 2005. And as a result of those

Q We will get to that in a moment. I am

What is the basis for saying that it is taxable income? And again, I am just asking for really talking about the withholding.

January 12,

21 what you -- I don't want to get into an argument 1 So the two potential types of withholding are Internal Revenue Code Section 3406, here. I just want to know what your basis is, what 2 authority you have -- you had for concluding that 3 backup withholding, and 3402(r). 3 4 Q My original question was: Did you have the revenue, the sources of revenue here which are 5 any precedent or did you refer to any precedent not taxable to the Tribe become taxable when including practical -- other Tribes, where distributed to members? 6 7 withholding was imposed on other than profits from 7 A Well, there we are basically looking at the individual question, and when an individual 8 gaming? 8 9 A Yes. 9 receives taxable income under Internal Revenue Code Q Okay. What Tribe is that and what 10 Section 61, that is gross income to them, unless 10 there is a specific exception. So we start with 11 precedent is that? 11 that to determine was the distribution to an 12 MR. WELSH: Wait. We have 12 13 individual taxable. 13 just --14 MR. JORDEN: Sure. So I mean that's the basic thing you are 14 THE WITNESS: As far as personal looking at to determine the taxable income. And 15 15 experience, I can't disclose any information then the next question is does the Tribe have to 16 16 regarding examinations of other Tribes or anyone 17 17 file a 1099. 6041 requires the filing of 1099s. that's not a plaintiff in this particular case. 18 And again, I mean -- you know, with all these 18 19 I can tell you in general that, you 19 lawyers in the room I hate to argue the law, but know, the withholding issues are a common issue in 20 20 the courts have ruled that Tribes are subject to almost every examination of a Tribe, with regard to 21 employment taxes, withholding. 21 its information return reporting requirements or 2.2 In my years of experience I have found 2.2 22 24 that without exception every Tribe that I've dealt Form 945 examinations. 1 with was -- was filing 1099s. There's been Supreme Court cases 4 that have indicated that Tribes are a person under 5 A And you know, between the law and 6 experience, all of that leads me to believe that 6 7 Tribes do have a requirement to file 1099s. 7 BY MR. When 8 Q Let me --9 you make a payment that requires a 1099, you are 9 A I am not sure --10 required to obtain the tax identification number of 10 Q Well, what I am looking for -the person to whom you made the payment. 11 A I am doing my best to explain my 11 12 If you don't -- if you don't acquire the 12 understanding. 13 tax identification number of the payee prior to 13 Q I understand. Q So describe to me how any of that would be relevant to your determination of whether the Tribe should have withheld payments?

A If the Tribe set aside money for taxpayers, and again, based on the previous years, we found that some of the money that was distributed to the Tribal members, the Tribal members had the choice of the Tribe investing it in these security accounts at Smith Barney, so the information in those accounts would then lead us to potential 1099 requirements, because the distribution to the member could have been in the manner of setting the money aside in an account for that member.

Q Okay. Item four refers to: Records of any and all dividends and interest paid to the Tribe, and Forms 1099 issued to the Tribe.

What's the relevance of that?

A As part of my examination, I have to determine the source of any distributions that were made. The source of distributions could have come from dividends or interest paid to the Tribe. And from dividends or interest paid to the Tribe. Andtherefore, knowledge of what dividends or interest were paid to the Miccosukee Tribe would be relevant to determining the source of amounts distributed.

Q How about Forms 1099?

A That would tell me what the dividends or interest earned in those accounts, you know, it would -- it would tell me the source, if it was interest or dividend income. And then, you know, if the amounts in those accounts were subsequently disbursed, then that would be relevant to determining the source of revenue for those disbursements.

Q How does that relate to the two accounts that you mentioned earlier that the Tribe uses to make distributions, the general account and the NTDR?

21 NTDR?
22 A If the -- if the -- if we found a

1 disbursement to a Tribal member, and the source of

 $2\ \ \,$ that disbursement was gaming revenue, then the

3 3402(r) withholding would apply.

If there was a disbursement to the Tribal member and the source of that disbursement was interest income or dividend income, then 3402(r) withholding would not apply.

8 Q I guess where I am confused is from -9 are you telling me that the Morgan Stanley records
10 would indicate to you which of those two accounts
11 were used to make the distribution?

A They may be part of that puzzle. You know. I mean putting together that puzzle from third-party records is no easy task. But, yes, the records may -- and may be one of the only ways, because if I see in the Morgan Stanley records a disbursement from a particular account, okay, then I would have to go and look and say, okay, how did the money get into the account? Did it come fromthe NTDR account? Did it come from interest or 21 dividends? Did it come from the general account?

22 Did it come from some other source? And each of

1 those questions is relevant to the inquiry of whether 3402(r) would apply.

Q Item six: Records maintained of transactions for or communications with the 5 Miccosukee Tribe, including all notes, memoranda

6 (informal or formal), correspondence, financial

7 statements, background or credit investigations,

8 and records identifying the stock transfer agent

9 and dividend disbursing agent.

How is that relevant to your determination of whether an amount should have been withheld?

13 A Again, I need to determine the nature, 14 recipient, and source of any disbursements made by 15 the Tribe. Not knowing what's in those records, I

16 can't say if there is anything there that's relevant or not, but they could include information

18 regarding other financial institutions, other

19 accounts of the Tribe that may have made

20 disbursements. There may be memoranda directing

21 Smith Barney to pay certain items and that

22 memoranda may indicate whether it was on behalf of

Then I see what were the 3 be relevant to the source of revenue that I deposits to the account. And that may lead me to subsequently found was distributed. 4 5 the source of the revenue. Q Explain to me what you mean by "source 5 If the deposits were from an account of revenue." Because I'm -- there are -- let me 6 7 that was the bingo hall's bank account, then I 7 just back up for a minute here. When I think of "source of revenue," I 8 think I'd have a pretty good indication that that 8 9 came from the bingo hall. 9 think of how did the Tribe get the money in the 10 If the deposit to the account was from 10 first place to put into the accounts. That could 11 be government advances; it could be taxes on 11 the Bureau of Indian Affairs, then that would give 12 me a pretty good indication that the source was enterprise; it could be revenues, net revenues from 12 some type of government grant. Is that -- is gambling; and there may be other sources. 13 13 that --Are you talking about something other 14 14 Q It is. I guess what I am trying to 15 15 than that when you refer to "source of revenue"? 16 determine is what's the relevance of that to your 16 A Well, there's other sources. I mean, 17 ultimate determination on withholding? 17 you know, tribes have money that comes from 18 A The relevance is whether it came from 18 government grants. They have money -- they may 19 net gaming revenue and is subject to 3402(r) have taken gaming revenue and put it in an interest 19 withholding. 20 20 bearing account that earned investment income, 21 And I have to add that, as we discussed 21 okay. They may have non-taxable sources of many times, and as you know, the Tribe has 22 revenue. I don't know of any. But they could. 2.2 94 96 Tribe sometimes do. If they then took that money contended that the money that they distribute, that 1 and put it in an account and it earned income -the source is the gross receipts tax that they impose on the casino, the Tribe has contended that 3 and by -- let -- they may have sources of revenue 3 that would not be taxable once distributed to the that's all nontaxable to Tribal members. Okay. 5 members. Okay. 5 While I don't think that there's much 6 If they put that in an account that 6 chance of the Tribe prevailing with that argument, 7 bears interest, okay, the -- typically the 7 nonetheless it makes sense in my examination to investment income, even though the, you know, the clearly determine which disbursements fall under 8 8 9 revenue itself is not subject to the tax when they 9 that category. So that if there is an ultimate 10 distribute it, the investment income is, okay. So 10 determination, you know, that even though I don't the nature of where the revenue came from is 11 think it's going to happen, but if it did, we could 11 12 relevant to the determinations that I need to make 12 then say, well, okay, that was these disbursements 13 in the examination. Q But with respect to the first category, namely where did the -- aside from investment earnings, where did the money come from, you wouldn't be able to determine that from any of these records; would you?
