

The Michigan State Law Review and the Michigan State University College of Law Indigenous Law & Policy Center present:

Indian Tribes and Human Rights Accountability Symposium

The symposium will serve as a catalyst to expand upon an idea presented by MSU Law Professor Wenona Singel in her forthcoming paper in the San Diego Law Review titled “Indian Tribes and Human Rights Accountability.” The event will encourage discussion about the possibility of creating an indigenous and intertribal mechanism to resolve the real and serious human rights issues in American Indian country.

October 4-5, 2012

The James B. Henry Center for Executive Development
Michigan State University

Confirmed presenters include:

John Borrows, University of Minnesota Law School
Kirsten Carlson, Wayne State University Law School
Kristen A. Carpenter, University of Colorado Law School
Trent Crable, Lower Elwha Klallam Tribe
John E. Echohawk, Native American Rights Fund
Matthew L.M. Fletcher, Michigan State University College of Law
Joseph Thomas Flies-Away, Independent Consultant
Carrie Garrow, Syracuse University College of Law
Joseph Gone, University of Michigan
Carole E. Goldberg, UCLA School of Law
Lani Guinier, Harvard Law School
Stacy Leeds, University of Arkansas School of Law
Eva Petoskey, Inter-Tribal Council of Michigan
Frank Pommersheim, University of South Dakota School of Law
Angela R. Riley, UCLA School of Law
Wenona Singel, Michigan State University College of Law
Joseph William Singer, Harvard Law School
Heidi K. Stark, University of Victoria
Gerald Torres, University of Texas School of Law
Rebecca Tsosie, Arizona State University Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law
Gwen Westerman, Minnesota State University

For more information, contact the Indigenous Law and Policy Center at 517-432-6939 or indigenous@law.msu.edu.

[www.law.msu.edu/
tribes-accountability](http://www.law.msu.edu/tribes-accountability)