

Join the National American Indian Court Judges Association and Casey Family Programs for a one-day Judicial Skills Training for Judges who hear child welfare cases. At this intensive training, attendees will receive information about national and state ICWA developments. Additionally, they will have the chance to engage in highly participatory sessions that will strengthen the skills needed to hear abuse, neglect and dependency cases and partake in round-table discussions with their fellow tribal judges. Above all, this training offers and opportunity for Judges to gain the knowledge that will ensure the preservation of Indian tribes' most precious resource—their children.

This training is FREE OF CHARGE with a limited number of travel and lodging scholarships available. Food will be provided. This training is open to JUDGES ONLY.
