

NOW ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS FOR PROCOPIO'S
SUMMER 2021 NATIVE AMERICAN LAW INTERNSHIP PROGRAM

By: Kerry K. Patterson | Partner | kerry.patterson@procopio.com

Procopio has a long-standing tradition of providing growth opportunities to the communities we serve. Procopio's Native American Law Practice Group extends this tradition by actively investing in the future leaders of Indian Country through offering paid internships for Native American law students or law students with an emphasis in Native American law. Please join us in identifying qualified legal students within Native American communities that may be interested in being part of this engaging opportunity.

The Native American Law Internship provides an opportunity for two Native American law students to gain hands-on experience dealing with everyday legal issues facing Native American communities. Interns are involved in matters that deal with specific Indian law-related legal practice matters and other legal problems facing tribal governments and Native entities. Procopio Interns reach out to local Native American youth to provide guidance and inspiration regarding educational direction and opportunities.

Interns join a nationwide network of the next generation of Native American Law attorneys in an active alumni program consisting of judicial clerks, governmental attorneys and associates at law firms. Following the internship, we remain active with our alumni to mentor and prepare them for success in the industry.

To learn more about our practice area and the legal issues affecting Native Americans, you may consider subscribing to our blog by clicking "follow" on the bottom left of this page. Then, each week, you will receive up-to-date information relating to law, policy and current events in Indian Country from Procopio attorneys and guest contributors.
