

TRIBAL LAW JOURNAL

Second Call for Submissions

The Tribal Law Journal, published at the University of New Mexico School of Law, is now accepting submissions for Volume 22. Submissions will be accepted until October 15, 2021.

The Tribal Law Journal was established in 1998 for the purpose of promoting Indigenous self-determination by facilitating discussion of the internal law of the world's Indigenous nations. The internal law of Indigenous nations encompasses traditional law, western law adopted by Indigenous nations, and a blend of western and Indigenous law. Underscoring this purpose is the recognition that traditional law is a source of law.

According to the founder of the Tribal Law Journal, Professor Emerita Christine Zuni Cruz, “the Tribal Law Journal is more than a journal, it is a movement—a modest, humble movement—to encourage Indigenous Peoples to own their own law and to preserve the Native intellect and philosophy.” It aims to “bring into legal scholarship discussion of Indigenous legal tradition and modern law where it has not been sufficiently treated as a subject of importance.” Christine Zuni Cruz, Shadow War Scholarship, Indigenous Legal Tradition and Modern Law in Indian Country, 9 TRIBAL L.J. 1, 18 (2008).

Article submissions may be sent to us by email at triballawjournal@gmail.com.

The Tribal Law Journal accepts both written and oral submissions, including multimedia projects (i.e., interviews, stories, art) from law students, practitioners, tribal members, and faculty members.

For more information, or if you have any questions or concerns, please contact us at triballawjournal@gmail.com.

Collectively,

Taylor Bingham, Managing Editor
Brittany Poirier, Citations Editor

Rob Waldroup (Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians), Editor-in-Chief

“Let Our Voices Be Heard, Let Our Stories Be Told.”