

Dear Authors and Scholars,

The Montana Law Review and the Public Land and Resources Law Review cordially invite you to submit article manuscripts for a special joint issue to be featured in VOL 86.2 of the Montana Law Review. This special joint issue will be published on an expedited timeline for the Summer of 2025.

Submission Guidelines

The Montana Law Review and the Public Land and Resources Law Review are currently accepting manuscripts from legal practitioners and scholars. We are specifically seeking articles related to Federal Indian law and Tribal Law issues under the theme of Vision for the Future.

Submission Deadlines

Please submit your article manuscript and curricula vitae through Scholastica or via email by Friday, December 6, 2024, at 5:00 p.m. Mountain Time. Publication offers will be distributed to authors via Scholastica by Friday, December 20, 2024, at 5:00 p.m. Mountain Time.

About the Montana Law Review

The Montana Law Review is one of the most important legal scholarship resources in the State of Montana, and it chronicles and evaluates developments in Montana law. The Montana Law Review aims to inform and influence to improve the creation, administration, and practice of law in this state, the region, and the nation.

About the Public Land and Resources Law Review

The Public Land and Resources Law Review is a premier legal journal that encourages those interested in public lands, natural resources, environmental, and Indian law to publish the results of their scholarship and research. The journal seeks to catalyze discussion and research in these essential legal areas and provide a resource for scholars and practitioners alike.

Please send any general inquiries or your article manuscript and curricula vitae to montanalawreview@mso.umt.edu or collin.stetzner@umontana.edu.

We look forward to reviewing your submissions!

Montana Law Review

Public Lands and Resources Law Review