1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 Defendants deliberately rejected available Tribal Court remedies and instead 3 chose expansive federal litigation. Defendants now attempt to excuse that strategic 4 choice by claiming the ACBCI Tribal Court offered no adequate remedies and that 5 exhaustion was therefore futile. Yet Defendants are presently before this Court 6 asserting precisely the jurisdictional and due process challenges they claim could 7 never be reviewed. In other words, judicial review always existed.

8 Unlike the circumstances presented in Johnson v. Gila River Indian 9 Community, Defendants here were not deprived of all avenues of review or 10 meaningful participation. After sophisticated counsel was retained, Plaintiff 11 immediately sought dialogue concerning the matter. Counsel responded that he 12 had "just been retained," was "trying this week to get up to speed," that "Mr.
13 Hudson is also becoming a client," and that he would "get back" to Plaintiff's 14 counsel "as soon as possible."

15 But he never did.

16 Instead, Defendants removed this possessory and comity matter to federal 17 court without further discussion and transformed it into expansive federal 18 litigation involving extensive counterclaims, tort theories, and collateral attacks on 19 Tribal Court jurisdiction. Plaintiff thereafter again sought dialogue and expressly 20 offered to stipulate to vacating the default judgment so the matter could be 21 litigated on the merits in Tribal Court.

22 Defendants again refused.

23 This record supports dismissal.

24 Defendants cannot voluntarily bypass available Tribal Court proceedings, 25 refuse consensual vacatur and merits adjudication, and then invoke their own 26 refusal as proof that exhaustion was futile. See National Farmers Union Ins. Cos.
27 v. Crow Tribe, 471 U.S. 845, 856-57 (1985) (tribal exhaustion doctrine requires 28 tribal courts receive first opportunity to evaluate jurisdiction); Iowa Mut. Ins. Co.

1 v. LaPlante, 480 U.S. 9, 16-17 (1987) (federal policy strongly favors Tribal Court
2 exhaustion and Tribal self-government); Johnson v. Gila River Indian Community, 3 174 F.3d 1032, 1036 (9th Cir. 1999) (futility applies where no meaningful tribal 4 remedy remains).

5 If, however, the Court concludes further Tribal proceedings should occur 6 before dismissal, Plaintiff remains willing to facilitate Tribal exhaustion through 7 consensual vacatur of the Tribal Court default judgment conditioned upon 8 reasonable equitable protections, including undertaking and related relief 9 preserving the parties' respective interests pending exhaustion and adjudication.

10 This Court possesses broad, inherent equitable authority to fashion such a 11 remedy and stay these federal proceedings to safeguard tribal sovereignty. Where 12 an outright dismissal is not granted, a structured, conditional stay is the preferred 13 vehicle used by federal dockets to preserve comity, allowing the local tribal 14 judiciary the first opportunity to evaluate its own competence and build an 15 informative evidentiary record. See Allstate Ins. Co. v. Chariot Holdings, Ltd., 911 16 F.3d 1102, 1106 (9th Cir. 2018).

17
18 II. DEFENDANTS DELIBERATELY AND REPEATEDLY REFUSED
19 AVAILABLE TRIBAL COURT REMEDIES

20 The factual record establishes that Defendants made a conscious, strategic 21 choice to refuse available Tribal Court remedies after sophisticated counsel 22 appeared, and after Plaintiff expressly offered to facilitate a full merits 23 adjudication in the local forum (Jacobs Decl. 9-15). Following the entry of the 24 Tribal Court default proceedings, corporate principal Lonnie Landers repeatedly 25 initiated contact with Plaintiff's counsel seeking discussions to reinstate or 26 continue the commercial leasehold arrangement on PSL-360 in direct conjunction 27 with a non-party backer, James Hudson (Jacobs Decl. 9-13). On April 30, 2025, 28 Mr. Landers specifically requested that Plaintiff "withhold taking any further legal

1 action" because Richard Freeman of Sheppard Mullin would be contacting 2 Plaintiff "very shortly" to settle the outstanding resolution and possession issues
3 (Jacobs Decl. 11).

4 Mr. Freeman did not contact Plaintiff. Instead, five days later, Mr. Landers
5 again contacted Plaintiff to push for further settlement discussions involving Mr.
6 Hudson (Jacobs Decl. 13). Driven by these persistent representations, Plaintiff's 7 counsel personally initiated dialogue with Mr. Freeman to address the dispute, the 8 status of the Tribal Court default, and a path forward for local merits adjudication 9 (Jacobs Decl. 13). Mr. Freeman responded the same day, confirming: "I have just 10 been retained and I am trying this week to get up to speed. Mr Hudson is also 11 becoming a client and we are finalizing that engagement. I will get back to you as 12 soon as possible when that engagement is finalized" (Jacobs Decl. 14).

13 Thus, immediately following the default proceedings: (1) sophisticated 14 federal counsel had already been retained; (2) James Hudson was actively 15 involved and funding the matter; and (3) litigation strategy was actively being 16 evaluated (Jacobs Decl. 14-16). Yet, despite representing that he would follow up 17 once "up to speed," Mr. Freeman never did so (Jacobs Decl. 16). Defendants 18 never sought reconsideration in the Tribal Court, never sought relief from the 19 default judgment, and never attempted to file any merits-based pleadings in that 20 forum (Jacobs Decl. 16-18). Instead, Defendants bypassed the local forum entirely 21 and chose immediate federal expansion through removal and the filing of broad, 22 collateral counterclaims.

23 More importantly, on June 14, 2025, after further consulting with his client, 24 Plaintiff's counsel wrote directly to Mr. Freeman and expressly offered to execute 25 a mutual stipulation to vacate the Tribal Court default judgment so the entire 26 leasehold case could be litigated on the merits in the Tribal Court (Jacobs Decl.
27 19-21). Defendants flatly refused that proposal (Jacobs Decl. 21). Defendants 28 cannot voluntarily bypass structured Tribal Court proceedings, reject multiple

1 formal offers of consensual vacatur, and then cite their own deliberate inaction as 2 proof that the local forum offered no adequate remedies. The procedural history 3 demonstrates that a meaningful avenue of review always existed; Defendants 4 simply refused to walk through it.

5
6 III. THE TRIBAL COURT WAS FUNCTIONING AS A JUDICIAL BODY
7 EXERCISING ADJUDICATORY DISCRETION UNDER ADOPTED
8 FEDERAL COURT RULES

9 Defendants repeatedly characterize the Tribal Court proceedings as 10 arbitrary, lawless, and procedurally illegitimate. The Tribal Court's own detailed, 11 written Order demonstrates the exact opposite (Jacobs Decl. Ex. A). The Tribal 12 Court explicitly invoked Rule 17 of the Tribal Court Rules-which expressly 13 mandates the application of federal law where Tribal law is silent-to address the 14 threshold question of artificial entity representation (Jacobs Decl. 3-7).
15 Recognizing the absence of controlling Tribal ordinances on point, the Court 16 stated: "Since there is no relevant Agua Caliente Tribal law on point, the Court 17 must first look to federal law to resolve the question" (Jacobs Decl. 4).

18 The Tribal Court thereafter strictly relied upon longstanding, binding 19 federal precedents, including Rowland v. California Men's Colony, 506 U.S. 194 20 (1993) and United States v. High Country Broadcasting Co., Inc., 3 F.3d 1244 (9th 21 Cir. 1993), to conclude that artificial corporate entities may not appear in court 22 through non-lawyer representatives. The striking of the non-compliant pleadings 23 and the subsequent entry of default was not an invented procedural trap; it was the 24 direct, predictable application of federal law principles explicitly incorporated into 25 the Tribal forum via Rule 17.

26 Furthermore, during those open-court proceedings, Lonnie Landers 27 explicitly stated on the record that he had been "advised by counsel he could 28 answer and appear In Pro Per," thereby establishing a clear, textbook baseline to 1 seek relief from default based upon attorney fault (Jacobs Decl. 6). A judicial 2 body possessing the structured authority to interpret its rules, incorporate federal 3 case law, strike non-compliant pleadings, and enter default judgment naturally 4 possesses the corresponding equitable authority to revisit, reconsider, or vacate its 5 own orders in the interests of justice. Defendants, however, chose to assume the 6 conclusion of "futility" rather than test it. The exhaustion doctrine does not permit 7 a litigant to manufacture a procedural logjam through invited error, refuse a 8 structural cure, and then brandish that self-created posture to strip a tribal 9 sovereign of its adjudicatory jurisdiction.

10 11 IV. THE COUNTERCLAIM REMAINS A LEASEHOLD, 12 DEFAULT, AND POSSESSION DISPUTE SUBJECT TO 13 MANDATORY EXHAUSTION

14 In an effort to escape the mandatory requirements of the tribal exhaustion 15 doctrine, Defendants attempt to recast their pleadings as an independent 16 assortment of federal statutory violations and common-law tort claims untethered 17 from the underlying leasehold. Their own operative Counterclaim completely 18 refutes this characterization. The Counterclaim is explicitly built upon allegations 19 of wrongful lease termination, interference with assignment rights, interference 20 with contract cure rights, impairment of commercial leasehold value, improper 21 lease enforcement protocols, and a continuing right to physical possession and 22 economic exploitation of PSL-360.

23 These extensive claims are not collateral to the leasehold controversy; they 24 are the leasehold controversy itself. Every asserted cause of action arises directly 25 from a single, indivisible nucleus of operative facts concerning whether a default 26 occurred, whether cure efforts were sufficient, who holds valid assignment rights, 27 and who is legally entitled to physical possession of Indian trust land. Litigants 28 cannot evade federal comity principles or the tribal exhaustion doctrine simply by 1 applying creative tort labels to a core landlord-tenant dispute.

2 This action remains, at its foundational core, a possessory and leasehold 3 dispute involving the continuing occupation and commercial exploitation of tribal 4 trust land. The Ninth Circuit has long established that a tribe possesses inherent 5 regulatory and adjudicatory jurisdiction over non-Indians operating a commercial 6 leasehold on tribal trust land. Water Wheel Camp Recreational Area, Inc. v.
7 LaRance, 642 F.3d 802 (9th Cir. 2011). Whether Defendants' underlying 8 jurisdictional and due process objections have merit is not the question currently 9 before this Court. The sole question is whether Defendants may refuse to litigate 10 those leasehold merits in the Tribal Court while simultaneously demanding that a 11 federal district court adjudicate those exact same possessory and leasehold rights.
12 Under established comity principles, they may not.

14 V. THE COUNTERCLAIM FAILS TO STATE TRULY INDEPENDENT
15 FEDERAL CLAIMS

16 Defendants assert that their claims escape tribal exhaustion because they 17 arise independently under 25 U.S.C. § 415, 25 C.F.R. Part 162, and federal 18 common law. However, the Counterclaim fails to identify any express private right 19 of action permitting a commercial lessee to sue an Indian landowner directly for 20 damages under those provisions. Alexander v. Sandoval, 532 U.S. 275 (2001) 21 remains fully controlling on this point. Federal statutory and regulatory 22 frameworks do not create private damages remedies against landowners absent 23 clear, unambiguous congressional intent.

24 The statutory provisions and BIA regulations cited by Defendants exist to 25 govern internal Bureau of Indian Affairs administration, leasing approval 26 procedures, and federal regulatory oversight frameworks. They do not create a 27 generalized federal tort regime designed to convert every standard commercial 28 lease default involving Indian trust land into an independent federal damages

1 action. Defendants continuously conflate comprehensive federal regulation with a 2 congressionally created private right of action; under long-standing Supreme 3 Court precedent, they are not the same.

4 Defendants' own stated theories confirm this fatal defect. The Counterclaim
5 repeatedly alleges that Plaintiff improperly interfered with BIA-supervised 6 assignment procedures, local cure protocols, and ongoing lease administration.
7 This remains an explicit dispute concerning the interpretation, performance, and 8 enforcement of the lease contract itself. Defendants' accompanying common-law 9 tort and Unfair Competition Law (UCL) claims are entirely derivative of this 10 underlying leasehold dispute, repackaging the exact same core transactional 11 grievances without identifying any independent, non-derivative injury separate 12 from the alleged impairment of their possessory interest in PSL-360. Similarly, 13 their claims for declaratory and injunctive relief merely request judicial 14 declarations concerning lease validity, assignment compliance, and possessory 15 rights. Because these claims are structurally derivative of the underlying leasehold 16 controversy, they remain fully subject to mandatory tribal exhaustion.

18 VI. THE COURT SHOULD RETAIN LIMITED JURISDICTION OVER 19 UNDERTAKING, JOINDER, AND ENFORCEMENT ISSUES

20 While Plaintiff invoked tribal exhaustion and remains fully prepared to 21 facilitate an immediate merits adjudication in the Tribal Court through a 22 consensual, stipulated vacatur, the procedural posture of this case has been 23 radically altered by Defendants' strategic maneuvers. Absent a formal stipulation 24 by the parties, a standard, unconditional return to the Tribal Court to move to set 25 aside the default judgment presents a significant procedural trap (Jacobs Decl. ¶ 26 40). Because Defendants have sat on their hands for over one year before seeking 27 this relief, the Tribal Court may legally lack the power to grant a contested motion 28 to vacate under its own local rules or strict jurisdictional time limitations (Jacobs

1 Decl. ¶ 40). If an unconditional, contested motion is denied by the Tribal Court on 2 those technical, timing-based grounds, Defendants will undoubtedly rush back to 3 this federal forum claiming that their tribal remedies were "futile" (Jacobs Decl. ¶ 4 40).

5 To break this procedural logjam and ensure a guaranteed, protected path to a 6 merits-based trial despite the passage of more than a year, Plaintiff is entirely 7 willing to execute an immediate stipulated, consensual vacatur of the 8 judgment—thereby completely bypassing any local procedural time-bars—but 9 only if Defendants are required to post an adequate financial undertaking to 10 protect Plaintiff during the ensuing litigation (Jacobs Decl. ¶ 41).

11 The current record further reflects that following an early mediation, James 12 Hudson and Lonnie Landers entered into a separate arrangement whereby Mr.
13 Hudson completely finances this expansive federal litigation in exchange for 14 long-term control over the leasehold interest and related economic rights on 15 PSL-360 (Jacobs Decl. ¶¶ 29-37; Ex. H). Mr. Hudson's financial and operational 16 entanglement long predates this federal lawsuit, including documented proposed 17 acquisition efforts during prior bankruptcy filings, direct operational funding, and 18 continuing litigation financing (Jacobs Decl. ¶¶ 30-33). Rather than focusing on 19 reopening the existing restaurant operations, the subsequent discussions between 20 counsel shifted entirely toward an expansive, multi-acre commercial 21 redevelopment plan, though no substantive proposals were ever formally produced 22 (Jacobs Decl. ¶ 35).

23 The record reflects severe, structural collectability concerns regarding the 24 nominal Defendants, including recurring leasehold delinquencies, major 25 arrearages, returned checks, and an open admission by corporate counsel that 26 "getting paper judgments against D&L and DANLON won't do them much good" 27 (Jacobs Decl. 24-28; Ex. G). As documented by BIA ledger entries, these defaults 28 reflect a twenty-year history of structural insolvency rather than an isolated

1 transactional anomaly (Jacobs Decl. Ex. G). Under these asymmetric 2 circumstances-where an unexposed financier drives federal litigation behind 3 empty shell companies-equity requires that any exhaustion stay occur under 4 conditions preserving the parties' financial interests (Jacobs Decl. 41).

5 Accordingly, Plaintiff remains willing to stipulate to an immediate vacatur 6 of the default judgment conditioned upon: (1) the prompt pursuit of a merits-based 7 trial in the Tribal Court; (2) the posting of a formal financial undertaking with the 8 Clerk of this Court in the amount of $300,000 to secure Plaintiff's mounting costs
9 and contractual fees; and (3) this Court retaining limited continuing jurisdiction 10 over security supervision, contractual attorneys' fees, and joinder issues (Jacobs 11 Decl. 43).

12 To prevent any ambiguity, Plaintiff intends to aggressively seek this 13 $300,000 financial undertaking to secure its continuing litigation costs and risks 14 regardless of the forum (Jacobs Decl. ¶ 44). Even if this Court denies our motion 15 to dismiss or stay and forces this matter to remain in federal court, Plaintiff will 16 immediately move for an equivalent undertaking here to mitigate the severe 17 collectability threats posed by these nominal, insolvent corporate Defendants 18 (Jacobs Decl. ¶ 44). However, because Defendants have spent over a year actively 19 evading local processes, judicial economy heavily favors forcing them to exhaust 20 their Tribal Court remedies before this Court spends its own finite resources 21 adjudicating expansive, collateral federal counterclaims (Jacobs Decl. ¶ 45).

22 Plaintiff further respectfully submits that limited joinder-related proceedings 23 concerning Mr. Hudson remain appropriate under Federal Rules of Civil 24 Procedure 19 and 21. Plaintiff does not presently seek a federal adjudication of the 25 underlying leasehold merits against Mr. Hudson. Rather, the record demonstrates 26 that Mr. Hudson has financed and promoted the expansive federal litigation 27 posture now before this Court, stands to benefit economically from long-term 28 possession of PSL-360, and is directly implicated in the equitable, undertaking,

1 and enforcement issues arising from a high-stakes strategy pursued through 2 nominally insolvent entities (Jacobs Decl. ¶¶ 41-44). Retaining limited jurisdiction 3 preserves sovereign tribal exhaustion while ensuring that the non-party economic 4 interest holder driving this litigation cannot deploy shell companies to insulate 5 himself from the financial and contractual consequences of this federal expansion.

6
7 VII. DEFENDANTS' REQUEST FOR SANCTIONS IS WHOLLY 8 MERITLESS AND REPRESENTS A TRANSPARENT EFFORT TO 9 DISTRACT THE COURT

10 Defendants' accompanying request for monetary sanctions is an abusive 11 litigation tactic manufactured entirely from routine scheduling friction, 12 mischaracterized professional courtesy, and administrative nits looking to be 13 picked (Jacobs Decl. ¶ 47). The record demonstrates that Plaintiff has acted in 14 consistent good faith, while Defendants have utilized procedural technicalities to 15 evade the core jurisdictional issue of tribal exhaustion.

16 1. The Premature Discovery Accusation is Flatly False:

17 Defendants' headline claim that Plaintiff "served" premature Requests for 18 Admissions in violation of Rule 26(d)(1) is a deliberate mischaracterization of a 19 routine logistical email. No discovery was ever formally served, and no proof of 20 service was ever generated or filed (Jacobs Decl. ¶ 48). Plaintiff's counsel merely 21 emailed a draft set of fifteen (15) focused RFAs to query counsel regarding their 22 service preferences, explicitly asking: "Gentlemen: Need I mail discovery to you, 23 or will you agree to electronic service?" (Jacobs Decl. ¶ 48). To characterize a 24 standard professional inquiry regarding electronic service protocols as 25 sanctionable behavior is entirely dishonest. Under Federal Rule of Civil 26 Procedure 5(d), a discovery request must be formally served with an 27 accompanying certificate of service to carry any legal consequence (p. 11).
28 Because the draft inquiries were never formally executed, served, or filed onto the

1 electronic docket, they remain legally non-existent for the purposes of a Rule 26
2 enforcement motion (p. 11). Defendants are asking this Court to issue monetary 3 sanctions over an informal scheduling email, exposing the frivolous nature of their 4 entire application (p. 11).

5 2. The Meet-and-Confer Process Was Conducted in Complete Good Faith:

6 Defendants' contention that Plaintiff bypassed Local Rule 7-3 or 7 compressed the meet-and-confer window to "harass" the defense is a bad-faith 8 distortion of the parties' communications (Jacobs Decl. ¶ 49). Plaintiff engaged in 9 a legitimate conference regarding both the dismissal grounds and the motion to 10 strike. Defense counsel used the meet-and-confer process not to find substantive 11 common ground, but to aggressively pick nits, drag their feet, and manufacture 12 technical objections to delay the ultimate return of this matter to the Tribal Court.

13 3. Defendants Suffer Zero Prejudice From a Corrected Formatting Issue:

14 Defendants' attempt to demand monetary sanctions over a previously 15 corrected clerical formatting issue from a prior remand motion is a transparent 16 effort to clutter the record (Jacobs Decl. ¶ 50). The replacement of the oversized 17 brief via a standard ex parte application was open, transparent, and intended to 18 achieve strict compliance with this Court's Standing Orders. It caused absolutely 19 zero substantive prejudice to Defendants and does not come close to meeting the 20 high threshold required for a finding of bad faith.

21 4. Protecting a Client from a One-Year Litigation Delay is Not "Harassment":

22 Plaintiff's counsel has never manipulated, altered, or "scrubbed" email 23 correspondence presented to this Court (Jacobs Decl. ¶ 51). Plaintiff has 24 consistently provided true and correct copies of all relevant communications.
25 While Plaintiff's counsel accurately observed that a prominent federal firm like 26 Sheppard Mullin possesses more than adequate internal "manpower" to handle 27 standard motion deadlines, the refusal to grant an expansive multi-month 28 scheduling extension was driven by a professional duty to protect the Plaintiff

1 from further delay. Defendants have spent over a year evading local tribal 2 processes; they cannot demand sanctions simply because Plaintiff declined to 3 allow this federal litigation to languish further.

4
5 VIII. CONCLUSION AND RELIEF REQUESTED

6 For the foregoing reasons, Plaintiff respectfully requests that this Court 7 enforce the mandatory doctrine of tribal exhaustion and fashion an order providing 8 the following relief:

9 1. DISMISS this action in its entirety, without prejudice, to allow the 10 underlying leasehold, default, and possessory claims to be adjudicated on the 11 merits in the Agua Caliente Band of Cahuilla Indians (ACBCI) Tribal Court; or, in 12 the alternative,

13 2. STAY these federal proceedings pending the complete exhaustion of Tribal 14 Court remedies, and explicitly condition said stay upon:

15 a. Defendants posting a formal financial undertaking with this Court in the 16 amount of $300,000 to secure Plaintiff's continuing costs, contractual attorney's 17 fees, and mounting litigation risks; and 18 b. The execution of a stipulated, consensual vacatur of the Tribal Court default 19 judgment-conditioned upon the filing of said undertaking-thereby neutralizing any 20 local procedural or one-year time-bars and ensuring an immediate path to a 21 merits-based trial in the local forum;

22 3. RETAIN limited continuing federal jurisdiction over the stayed action 23 specifically to supervise the financial security, oversee necessary joinder 24 proceedings concerning James Hudson, and adjudicate ultimate fee-shifting or 25 enforcement disputes; and 26 4. DENY Defendants' baseless and manufactured request for monetary 27 sanctions in its entirety.
